What We Do

GoGreenInStages.com is a Montreal company founded by a teacher concerned with the health and environmental dangers surrounding the products used in our homes, schools and businesses.

The company's activities focus on providing better alternatives in areas such as food and drink containers, personal care and cleaning products, sustainable office supplies and energy management. Products include stainless steel water bottles and containers, bamboo and jute based products, non-toxic, natural and organic personal care and cleaning products, as well as solar and human charged radios and lanterns.

GoGreenInStages.com operates an online store which ships products across Canada, the US and, increasingly, overseas. Other initiatives include supporting schools and community organizations with their fundraising and environmental awareness programs. As an example, "Waste-Free" lunch programs in schools are an increasingly popular form of social action and fundraising. GoGreenInStages.com supports schools by offering volume purchasing power for healthy and environmentally friendly products like reusable lunch totes, food jars and thermoses, stainless steel bottles and containers. These products are meant to replace single use products which generate mountains of litter and toxins.

Companies and individuals interested in replacing environmentally damaging plastic and Styrofoam disposable tableware can order biodegradable plates and cutlery made from natural materials like corn, bamboo and potato starches. These tableware items are fully compostable.

GoGreenInStages.com includes a blog outlining the latest news on enviro products and movements. The company does outreach work through public speaking engagements, eco kiosks and eco parties for local clients and community groups.
